QUINN SHOT FIRST...

BAM!
BLAM!

GET 'IM, PINKMAN!
HE KNOWS... UNGH!

SHERIFF OF TOMBSTONE

AT THEIR TRAIL, THEY REFUSED TO TALK TOO... DESPITE THE FACT THAT THEY KNEW THE SHERIFF HAD HEARD THEIR BOSS'S NAME...

IT DIDN'T TAKE LONG... THE WARDEN, THE JUDGE, AND A FEDERAL MARSHAL TRUMPED UP THE CHARGES AND GOT LUKE ADMITTED TO STATE PRISON...

CHARLTON COMICS GIVE YOU MORE!

THE WARDEN ASSIGNED LUKE TO SHIMOLIVAR'S CELL--

WH - WHAT ARE YOU DOIN' HERE? GET OUT-- LET ME ALONE!

WHY, OLIVAR? ARE YOU AFRAID OF FANNING IN HERE TOO? HE CAN'T GET AT YOU HERE...

Y-YOU DON'T KNOW FANNING! HE'LL GET IN, ALL RIGHT-- HE'LL GET OUT AGAIN WHEN HE WANTS TO! YOU'LL SEE...

TWO WEEKS PASSED... TWO WEEKS IN WHICH LUKE TRIED EVERY TRICK HE KNEW TO GET ONE OF FANNING'S THREE HIRED PUNKS TO TALK! AT THE END OF THE SECOND WEEK THE WARDEN SENT FOR THE PINT-SIZED SHERIFF...

WHAT'S UP, SIR?

YOUR FRIEND FANNING IS IN HERE, LUKE! HE'S IN THE YARD NOW!

WHAT'S HE IN FOR, WARDEN?

HE GOT HIMSELF ARRESTED WITH PAPERS ON HIM THAT INDICATED HE'S A MAN WANTED FOR PAROLE VIOLATION! HE WOULDN'T TALK AND THE MARSHAL HAD NO CHOICE BUT TO SEND HIM HERE!

FANNING CAN GET OUT ANY TIME HE DENIES THE MISTAKEN IDENTITY AND PROVES THAT HIS REAL NAME IS FANNING! HE'LL DO THAT AS SOON AS HE'S ACCOMPLISHED HIS PURPOSE IN COMING HERE...

WHICH IS?

...TO KILL YOU!

SINGING BULLETS

The final roundup of the cattle on the Bar E Ranch had been completed. At sunup on Thursday the cattle drive would start towards Dodge City. Hank Sheridan, owner of the ranch, was going over last minute details with his foreman, Bill Turner.

"We can't drive more than three thousand steer at the most," figured Hank. "That's the maximum we can water in safely. Drinking side by side they would make a line a mile long. If they are too thirsty, fights will develop between them for more room to drink."

"Outside of that problem," added the foreman, "we have three others to consider. When there were buffalo on the plains, the redskins rarely stole cattle. They preferred buffalo meat to the cattle. We may have trouble with Chief Long Bow when we get near his territory. They say he demands that he be paid in order to travel in safety as he considers the country his own. Second problem will be the rustlers. We can take care of any group of them except Mike Clark's boys. They would stop at nothing to get their hands on our stock. Finally, we must take every precaution against a stampede. A waste of precious time to round up the herd once it spreads out on the plains."

A well built young lady entered the large living room of the ranch house. She wore a leather skirt, brown shirt, and her blond hair was tied in back with a ribbon in the pony style.

"Just to remind you, dad," she interrupted, "that this time I am going with you. In the past you have always given me one excuse or another. Jim is outside with the chuck wagon. Says he is taking along food fit for a woman."

"You win this time," surrendered her father. "Take your favorite horse with you. Hope you enjoy roughing it with us."

Outside of the ranch house, Jim Davis was filling up his chuck wagon. He was considered the best cook this side of the Rio Grand. The chuck wagon was made by attaching a large box to the back of an ordinary springless four wheeled farm wagon. This box was known as the chuck box. It contained shelves and drawers for eating equipment. The rear part of the box was hinged and had legs. It could be opened into a table for the use of the cook. The wagon also had a water barrel and a fuel box. It was drawn by four mules. Jim Davis was so busy that he hardly noticed a rider who had dismounted.

"I'm looking for Hank Sheridan."

"It it's a job you want, then you're wasting your time," replied the cook. "We turned away more than fifty men during the past week. But if it is on other business then just walk inside. No need to knock."

Suddenly Helen Sheridan found herself facing a tall thin young man. He smiled at her and she liked the way he looked.

"The name is Jeff Davis," he said simply.

"Any man with that name is welcome in this house," said the owner of the Bar E Ranch. "What can I do for you?"

"I would like to go with you on your trip to Dodge City," he explained. "I am collecting a group of western songs. My book is almost finished. I want to watch cowboys on the trail. I have a letter of introduction from Governor Miller of this state."

Hank Sheridan read the letter and then spoke to his foreman.

"Let him sleep in the bunk house tonight. He leaves with us tomorrow."

"Not in the bunk house," suggested Helen.

"He happens to be a guest of yours now. I'll have Mrs. Swanson make up a guest room for him."

The rest of the day passed uneventful. The guest retired early after supper and so did the rest of the household. In the morning they were all up with the sun. The herd had been collected at a point five miles north of the ranch and soon the drive was on its way. On each side of the marching trail-herd, the cowboys rode in evenly spaced intervals. The first man was known as the lead rider. Things were uneventful for the next three days. Jeff Davis would sit quietly around a camp fire and listen to the men sing songs. He jotted down the words in a notebook. Then Helen Sheridan had what seemed to her to be a simple, natural idea.

"Why don't you sing one of the songs in your book for us?"

"I have a terribly frightening singing voice," admitted Jeff. "It can do startling things to animals and people."

"Nonsense," said Helen's father. "You have heard us sing. Now we want you to sing for us."

Jeff merely shrugged his shoulders in a peculiar way. It was as though he knew what might happen. He opened his mouth and from it came the words:

"Out in the unknown West,
A Man is at His best,
When he meets the final test."

Then it happened! Some of the longhorns began to run wild and within five minutes there was a stampede. Into the saddle jumped every cowboy. Some of them waved saddle blankets. Several hours later the stampede was broken. The riders were tired. Yet they had to examine the rebunched cattle and check for any possible damage to the stock.

"All my fault," wailed Jeff Davis. "I warned you not to let me sing."

"Stop your fooling," half laughed Helen. "It's nice of you to have that humor for us now. It had nothing to do with your singing. Just something in the air. Longhorns are sensitive animals."

"To my singing," insisted the young man.

Helen found she had a job on her hand. She spoke to the foreman and he in turn told the cowboys what to do. Each one of them personally told Jeff Davis that his singing had nothing to do with what had happened.

Northward went the herd. Two weeks later they ran into trouble as a large number of mounted Indians appeared on the horizon.

"Chief Long Bow," warned the foreman. "We better check our guns and ammunition."

The chief was a practical business man. He spoke directly to Hank Sheridan.

"Ten per cent of your stock and you go through the territory peacefully."

"But you don't own this land," protested the ranch owner. "I won't pay you a cent."

"You'll be sorry," threatened the chief.

"You'll be sorry yourself," interrupted Jeff Davis. "Now watch what I am going to do."

He swung into his saddle and rode up to the lead longhorns. Then he opened his mouth and sang:

"When a cowboy is brave,
Anyone he can save,
Be he hero or knave."

It happened again! The animals went wild and headed straight for the Indians on the horizons. The redskins feared a stampede worse than a plague. They rode for their lives, dropping their guns and arrows. Chief Long Bow saw with his own eyes the terrible event.

"El Diablo," he managed to say. "We will never bother you again. We shall help collect your animals. Please forgive me."

Northward went the herd and again things were peaceful. Everyone noticed that Helen and Jeff were always riding side by side.

"He'll make a good son-in-law," suggested the foreman.

"As long as he knows when to sing and when not," replied the ranch owner.

Helen and Jeff were some miles ahead of the herd when a masked man with a gun in his hand suddenly appeared.

"I am Mike Clark the rustler," he announced.

"So what?" retorted Davis. "Put that gun down or I'll sing a song and something will happen."

"Chief Long Bow told me some foolish stuff about a man who can sing like El Diablo. Let me hear you sing."

"You'll be sorry," warned Jeff. "Helen, you hold your reins tightly. Something is going to happen."

He opened his mouth and from it came the words:

"A bad horse thief
Came to his grief,
His life was brief."

Mike Clark's horse bolted and threw his master to the ground. In that second, Jeff Davis had unholstered his pistol.

"Don't move or I'll shoot."

Another week and the herd was delivered safely to the buyer in Dodge City. Jeff Davis delivered his prisoner and received a thousand dollars reward. Of course Helen and Jeff were married. If people tell you that when their first born boy cried, the cattle stampeded, it is a big fib!
